The initial meeting of the Redwood City Community Council was held Wednesday evening at the office of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce with representatives of 13 organizations in town present. After a general discussion of the various organizations, the council will return to its own organization with a report of what the representatives thought of the matter. It is believed that in this way a better understanding and more concerted effort may be secured for the organizations of the city.

Thirteen organizations were present Wednesday night. Six of the organizations have signified a willingness to join in the council but did not have representatives at the meeting.

Preparations Made For Alumni Comedy

George Cleese

Sequoia Auditorium Will Be Scene of "The Patsy"

The quiet Tony Anderson is the idealistic real estate salesman in "The Patsy", alumni play, being given tomorrow night in the auditorium of the high school. This part is being portrayed by George Cleese, graduate of 1924. Tony is the young man that is in love with Grace Harrington and is coming to see her, meets Grace's younger sister, Patricia. Both have a lonesome complex so they decide to form a lonesome club. Tony proceeds to help Patricia out by adding her to the club. He is not in love with the man she loves. Patricia agrees to let him teach her his "Love Lessons" when he says, "I know it sounds foolish, Patricia, but listen to reason. When people want to learn how to play bridge they take bridge lessons--when they want to learn how to play any old way--without knowing anything. That's why there's so many unhappy love affairs."

In the earlier part of the play, Tony is confronted with the problem of whether to love the "family beauty" or the "family intelligence." Grace is the self-styled "beauty" and Patricia, the "intelligence."

Tony is not favored by the hysterical "Ma" Harrington as a suitor for her daughters, mainly because he does not play bridge and because he talks psychology. But she does like the rich boy, Billy Caldwell.

George is very well suited for his part and is carrying it out exceptionally well. He has had much experience in dramatic lines--most of his acting has been in high school plays. "George, as Tony, is a well dressed blonde, conveys the idea of wealth and taste--but although very pleasant and agreeable in manner, he is rather shy and quiet, almost timid."

A matinee for children will occur this afternoon at 3:15 and the main performance is tomorrow, Saturday night, at 8:15 o'clock. Seats may be reserved at Ryan's drug store for fifty or seventy-five cents.

Two Cars Collide on Highway Saturday; Fatal Result Follows

Injuries which resulted fatally for Pedro Taitano, 55, a resident of Five Points, were received Saturday in a crash between two cars on the highway. Taitano was riding in a car driven by Manuel Rosano of 358 Willis street, Daly City. In the same car was a nephew of Rosano by the same name.

As Rosano drove onto the highway from Redwood avenue to cross to Spruce street, his car was struck by one driven by E. R. Brakesman of Los Angeles, who was accompanied by Mrs. Brakesman.

Both cars were badly wrecked and Taitano was thrown out upon the pavement. The other occupants of the two cars escaped without injury, but Taitano was removed to the Community hospital by Fred Myers and R. P. Gearaghty, both of this city, who were witnesses to the crash. At the hospital it was found that he was suffering from cranial injuries from which he passed away shortly afterward.

Taitano was a native of Guam. He is survived by his widow, Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at Mt. Carmel Catholic church which were followed by interment in Holy Cross cemetery at Menlo Park.

An inquest was held Wednesday afternoon by County Coroner McGovern.

The inquest jury, however, made no recommendations as to the fixing of responsibility for the accident.

Modern "Beer Truck" Seized by Police

Remember back in the old days when beer trucks were huge affairs drawn by a span of sleek draft horses resplendent in shining brass and with a large girl behind the wheel? Well, you know they were empty--but you knew they weren't.

Well, the old beer truck has been succeeded by later models. The present style is a sedan in which the bottles are wrapped in newspaper, are packed and then covered with sacks, rugs or whatever else is most handy.

It was in the latter type of "truck" that a man giving his name as Frank Jones and his address as 100 Allison street, San Francisco, was arrested Tuesday evening by Officer Clyde Genocchio of the Redwood City police force. Genocchio found in Jones' car four orange boxes packed with beer, forty pint bottles in each box.

Jones was booked at the county jail and held for lack of $250 cash bail. He appeared before Judge Mansfield yesterday afternoon.

TOO MANY WIVES CAUSE MAN TROUBLE

Times have changed since the days of King Solomon. That wise monarch is reported to have lived in peace and contentment with one thousand wives, while today a man is jailed for the possession of only two or three.

Lee Wellington Osborne, 29, found this week that the wise men of today abstain from a multiplicity of wives, despite the shining example of the ancient king, for he spent the week in the county jail and now faces a charge of bigamy in the Superior court of this county.

Osborne was thought at first to have been the loving husband of three wives but investigations by District Attorney Swart have led to the conclusion that he was legally divorced from his first wife before marrying the second, leaving him with only two wives at the present time.

Osborne's third wife, Mrs. Lillian Pearl Osborne of San Francisco, this week filed a petition for annulment of her marriage on the ground that Osborne already had a wife at the time that he married her. She also asks the custody of their five months old child. Another wife, Mrs. Mamie Osborne lives in Los Angeles.

Osborne was given a preliminary hearing in the court of Justice of the Peace Edward McAuliffe, and was held over to the Superior court. His bail was set at $10,000.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. FANNY BARNETT

Funeral services were held Monday from the parlors of Layne & Tinney for Mrs. Fanny Barnett who passed away Saturday at her home at 441 Jackson street, aged 77 years. The services were conducted by Rev. C. E. Winning and were followed by interment in Alta Mesa cemetery.

Mrs. Barnett was a native of New York, and the widow of the late Andrew Barnett. She was the mother of Mrs. Fanny E. Davidson of this city with whom she had been making her home. She had been making her home. She had been making her home. She had been making her home.

Sequoia Basketball Team Wins Final Match From Palo Alto

Before a roaring mob of spectators that packed the Sequoia High School gymnasium on Wednesday, Feb. 15, the Sequoia 130-pound basketball team shot its way to a 23 to 12 victory over the Palo Alto winners and will receive its awards block sweaters. The Cherokees played "heads up" ball and allowed only a few goals within the double lines.

With Lutz and Britschgi leading their sides the score was run up to 4 to 1 at the end of the first quarter and then with "Frenchy" Campaigne getting a look in by dint of hard defensive and offensive playing the Cherokees took the lead of 10 to 6 at the half. Shine and Rayer broke up many Palo Alto plays before they got a fair start and this seemed to take the heart right out of the Red and Greeners. At the beginning of the second semester the Indians came back stronger than ever and with practically everybody on the team getting a crack at the old iron hoop, the score was run up to 18 to 9 at the end of the third quarter. Ten in the last quarter the Sequoia team eased off a little and played a more defensive game, taking fewer shots but the ones they did take were good.

Lutz and Britschgi were tied for high point honors with six points each and Shine and Campaigne were right at their heels. Rayer played a splendid game as a running mate for Captain Shine at guard and certainly everyone of the first string deserves an all P. A. L. rating.

In the last three minutes, Coach Frank Griffin sent in his scrubs and immediately they set about to sink a long shot.

Both schools were well represented in the bleachers--both by bands and rooters and the spirit that they showed was indeed a pleasure. Frank Needles of St. Ignace refereed and not once did he make a really bad error and not once was he booed or hissed over a decision.

In an aftermath game the Darcy sport shop team of San Jose defeated the Sequoia Athletic Club by a large score.

ROCK HOME IN SAN CARLOS RAISED BY NIGHT BLAZE

A fire, thought to have originated from sparks from the chimney, Wednesday evening completely destroyed the home of Otto Kock on Laurel street in San Carlos. The family were asleep in the house at the time they were awakened by the noise of the fire, which had already gained great headway. The loss, including furniture, is estimated at $7,000, partially covered by insurance.

The Kock residence was built in Redwood City and was the home of the late Charles Fox, at one time superior judge of this county and an early editor of this paper. The house was moved to San Carlos many years ago.

THE 130-POUND TEAM WON ITS GAME AFTER A RATHER POOR START

The 130-pound team won its game after a rather poor start by the score of 15 to 8. The starting line-ups without Lutz did not fare so well and the San Jose team quickly took the lead. Then Lutz was injected into the fray and quickly turned the tide but the score at half time was five apiece. Beginning with the second half, Lutz, Campaigne and Britschgi opened up and "shot the works." Gates, San Jose's stellar pivot man, was high point man of the contest of putting the "leather tomato" through the hoop for six points. Campaigne was second with five and Lutz right on his toes with four. Rayer and Captain Tom Shine played a defensive ball, allowing only two field goals in the vicinity of the hoop.

San Jose overwhelmed the Cherokees Unlimited team with fast floor work and fairly "hot" eye for the hoop. Anderson looped the basket for twelve digits, and was high point man. Captain Jones of the Cherokees squad played a fairly good game but could not find the basket.

The death of Ira L. King, 22, Los Angeles boy who was killed at the plant of the Pacific Portland Cement Co. last August when he fell from the roof of a building on which he was working to the cement floor forty feet below, was made the basis of an action for damages filed here this week by Mrs. Ella King, his mother.

Noted Psychologist To Repeat Lectures

Viola Sweet

Viola Sweet, psychologist of Denver, Colorado, who has just completed a very successful series of lectures in Palo Alto, will open a new series of free lectures Monday night, Feb. 20th, in the Masonic Temple auditorium in Palo Alto.

Because of the interest and appreciation of those who heard Mrs. Sweet in her former series, numerous requests have been made for her to repeat the work and as a result these new programs have been arranged.

Mrs. Sweet spent the greater part of last year in southern California, where she had very splendid audiences. At her first lecture in the Santa Monica Bay Woman's club one hundred extra chairs were required to seat the audience. At Glendale she had the largest audience and the largest class of any psychologist who appeared there.

The general theme of the addresses will be "The Game of Life and How to Play It." Mrs. Sweet insists that life is not a battle as so many believe, but instead a game which one can play happily and successfully by mastering the rules.

"An understanding of the rules of the game," says Mrs. Sweet, "enables anyone to be well, happy and successful. Much of the unhappiness in life is caused by illness, lack of love and understanding of human relationships, and lack of money." Mrs. Sweet will discuss these everyday problems and how to solve them.

The subject of the opening lecture next Monday, February 20th, will be "Making Dreams Come True." Other topics are, "The Road to Happiness," "The Joy of Living," "The New Psychology," "What It Will Do," "Personality and the Pay Check," and "The Shortest Road to Success."

A musical program from 7:30 to 8:00 o'clock will precede each lecture. These programs are open to the public without charge and all are cordially invited.

TOWN FALLING SHORT ON BOY SCOUT DRIVE

The drive of the Boy Scouts for funds for the coming year has so far met indifferent success in this city. After a week of work the committee of the Boy Scouts have received only $452 to date out of a quota of $1250.

The money so far pledged represents 70 subscriptions and has been made without any personal solicitation. In other towns of the county, the quota has been reached and in some cases exceeded. Redwood City has always supported the Boy Scouts liberally, and it is hoped by the committee that a more liberal response will be given during the next week.

Mrs. Alexander was a native of San Francisco and was 34 years of age. With her husband, she had made her home in this city for the past four years.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 p. m. today at the parlors of Layne & Tinney, where Dr. C. E. Winning, pastor of the Methodist church, will conduct the services. Interment will be in Cypress Lawn.

CALIFORNIA
NEWS BRIEFS

The question whether branches of the University of California should be established in such cities as Sacramento, Fresno and San Diego is among those to be considered in an educational survey to be started by the State in April. The advisability of four-year colleges in the cities mentioned has been under discussion.

An automobile standard for formal State functions, similar in design to that of the President of the United States, was presented by the officers of the California National Guard. The standard, turned over to the Governor by Adjutant General R. E. Mittelstaedt, carries the California seal in colors on a blue background, and four silver stars signifying the commander-in-chief of the State military.

The prediction that California's gasoline tax revenues will reach $32,000,000 in 1928, as compared to $24,443,137, made at Sacramento by the State Board of Equalization following the announcement that the tax for the last quarter of 1927 totaled $7,566,919. Dixwell L. Pierce, secretary of the board, explained that the last three months of 1927 constituted the first full quarter the 3-cent per gallon tax was levied.

"Young California" to the total number of 218,499 was in attendance in California's high schools, junior high school and junior colleges on October 1, 1927, with the opening of the present school term. Later figures announced by Walter E. Morgan, chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the State Department of Education, a few days ago show that students in regular high schools numbered 119,038, in junior high schools 91,288, and in junior colleges 8173. There were 398 high schools in operation in California on that date. One hundred and twenty-eight junior high schools were being maintained, and twenty junior colleges.

To meet conditions of increased congestion and higher legal speed limits on California highways, the California State Automobile Association is launching a program of reconstruction of its yellow-diamond road-sign system, according to announcement last week by James W. Johnson, association chief engineer. "These new and improved types of signs," said Johnson, "will provide not only better protection to motorists along their routes even more quickly and easily than does the existing sign system, which is considered a model for the Nation."

The American Automobile Association is urging its 958 affiliated clubs to adopt the public school traffic rules as developed in this State by the California State Automobile Association in co-operation with school and police authorities. In assisting member clubs to organize and train juvenile traffic officer squads, the nation-wide motorists' organization has issued a pamphlet of instruction based on the operation of school reserve units as organized by State Automobile Associations in twenty-nine cities in Northern and Central California. Many Three A clubs have adopted the plan.

Bert B. Meek, state director of public works, announced last week that orders involving the expenditure of $994,237.04 for highway construction and maintenance work have been ratified in order to carry out the state administration's policy of providing as much work as possible for the unemployed during the slack season. General allocation of the funds give the forty-five northern counties $130,586.37 for improvement and maintenance work and $64,500 in supplemental allotments, and the thirteen southern counties $228,750.67 for improvement work. In addition, $74,000 is set aside for surveys and preparation of plans, $241,000 to cover engineering expenses and inspection and $100,000 for purchase of right of way.

Appointment of Professor Charles B. Wing of Stanford University as chief of the State division of parks was announced last week by Fred G. Stevenot, director of the State department of natural resources. Wing will become permanent head of parks of the division of parks, on nomination of the State park commission, succeeding W. B. Rider, who has been temporary chief of the division since its organization under new legislation. The salary is $5,000 a year. The division of parks, operating under the department of natural resources and the park commission, has jurisdiction over existing State parks and the duty of building up a proposed comprehensive State park system. To finance this undertaking a $6,000,000 bond issue will appear on the November election ballot.

One hundred of Mexico's most prominent educators will come to California next month for a thirty-day visit. This was announced in Berkeley last week following a meeting of the Faculty Club of the University of California. Their visit comes as a result of arrangements made by Dr. C. N. Thomas of San Jose, general director of the International Council for Educational Progress, who recently returned from Mexico, where he held conferences with President Calles, Ambassador Morrow and others. The Mexican visitors will spend two weeks in Northern California.

Total applications for permission to sell securities filed with the state railroad commission during December, 1927, aggregated 392, the commission announced at San Francisco last week. During the same month 435 permits were issued. Brokers' licenses sought numbered 466, while only seven were issued. Of the 1,275 agents' certificates sought, 530 were issued. The commission issued 230 orders of revocation and sixty-three suspensions. Total applications of all classes numbered 2,133.

Plans for a bridge to link Tiburon, Marin county, with Fleming Point, Alameda county, were revealed at San Rafael last week by T. A. Tomasini, San Francisco marine engineer. The structure, which will be six and one-half miles long, will cost approximately $15,000,000 and will take three and a half years to construct, Tomasini said. Tomasini declared that he represents eastern capital ready to start work within sixty days after receiving required franchises.

The State collected $951,125.76 in unpaid wages for California workers during the last year, according to a report submitted to Governor Young by Will J. French, State director of industrial relations. The Division of Labor Statistics and Law Enforcement, French said, received 32,431 complaints of various sorts during 1927, a gain of 3.9 per cent over the previous year. Wage complaints made up 25,751 of the 1927 total.

The fossilized shoulder bones of an extinct species of animal, thought to have belonged to the Pliocene age, have been found 125 feet underground in a mine shaft in Butte county, according to word from Oroville. The specimens have been submitted to scientists at the University of California. The discovery was made by R. E. Blum, miner of Pentz.

Marin county supervisors, at their monthly meeting last week, voted to send a letter to Governor Young and other members of the Highway Commission expressing their appreciation of the $750,000 appropriation from State highway funds for Marin county roads. Highways between Sausalito and Ignacio and between San Rafael and Point San Quentin will benefit from the appropriations.

Four broadcasting stations are being established by the State Fish and Game Commission to effect rapid communication between game wardens throughout the State and the Sacramento headquarters of the commission. About 75 per cent of the wardens patrolling fishing and hunting grounds will carry portable receiving sets. The broadcasting stations will be located at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento and San Diego.

Governor C. C. Young and his cabinet directors are considering formulation of a program under which the California ocean beaches, fast passing into private control at many points, can be preserved for the people of future generations. "All Southern California beaches," according to the belief of Governor Young, "will be privately owned within fifty years unless something constructive can be done to preserve them for the public." Establishment of State parks on the ocean shore has been suggested as one means of assuring retention of choice beach lands for public recreational purposes.

State Commander Phil Dodson of the American Legion has called upon each of the 300-odd posts of the World War Veterans' organization in California to join in a great tree-planting campaign during the coming months. Each post of the Legion will be asked to plant at least 100 trees as a part of the reforestation and civic beautification work of the organization in this State. "We hope to have 50,000 new trees planted by the American Legion members of California during this year in parks, along roadides, on the mountains and in the valleys," Commander Dodson declares. "We will have accomplished something worthwhile for California when we have completed our program for this year," he said.

Permits for water diversion in several parts of the State, representing contemplated development work to cost approximately $4,000,000, were announced by the State division of water rights last week as having been issued during the month of January. In that period a total of sixteen permits were issued and twenty-eight applications were received. Among the largest of the permits were two issued to the Snow Mountain Water and Power Company of San Francisco for diversions in Lake County for the manufacture of electric power to be wholesaled to companies supplying cities in the Napa, Santa Rosa, Mendocino and Lake counties, and for the distribution of water to the Potter Valley Irrigation District for 4,900 acres of land.

Appointment of Burke H. Critchfield, formerly with the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics at San Francisco, as chief of the State division of markets, was announced a few days ago by Governor C. C. Young. Critchfield has been selected for the position by the Federal government and the State Department of Agriculture, headed by Director Geo. H. Hecke, in connection with renewal of the joint Federal-State marketing service arrangement in California, the governor said. Willis A. Sherman, who has been serving as chief of the State division of markets since last June, will return in the near future to his duties with the bureau of agricultural economics in Washington, D. C., it was announced.

One hundred and sixty pounds of gold in one slab, reputed to have had a value of nearly $40,000, has been found in the old Tightner mine at Alleghany, Sierra county, and has served to recall the days of bonanza mining in the Grass Valley section when fortunes were made and lost overnight. The find at Alleghany was made by the Sixteen to One Company, which two years ago took over the bulk of the Tightner holdings from the Clarke interests of Montana, which acquired the mine following its period of great production twenty years ago.

William Russell Byrne, Los Angeles mining engineer, has just completed an examination of a large area of peculiar mineral deposits on Pittsburg Creek, just south of Alturas, Modoc county. The deposits consist of a considerable area of cement-bearing rock and from samples submitted the cement manufactured from this rock formation makes a concrete unequalled for hardness. Byrne says he will make a favorable report to his clients in Los Angeles, who, if they accept his report, may establish a $1,500,000 plant at Alturas for the working of the field.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinaki of 526 1st Ave. ne, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

A Task Well Handled

WHEN B. E. Myers was called to assume control of the city's finances he faced a problem which to most people seemed unsurmountable. The city's treasury was depleted; records were missing; bills were due which the town possessed no funds to meet; each department of the city government was handling its own affairs and buying what it needed and a shortage of more than eighty thousand dollars had thrown the citizenry into a state of mind heavily charged with doubt and distrust.

When a man to meet these contingencies; a man with sufficient experience in accounting and finance to elaborate a system, a man possessed of a mind for detail work, and yet with a breadth of vision, capable of planning and building a firm foundation upon which the future finances of this city might safely rest; the minds of the trustees turned unanimously to one man, B. E. Myers.

In the few months that Myers has been in office he has justified fully the confidence placed in him. He has assisted the city government to successfully weather a crisis which without his aid might have proved very discomfiting. He has placed the finances of Redwood City on a sound, systematic, business-like basis; a basis moreover which will obviate any further difficulties such as the town had unfortunately to undergo recently.

A man of the highest integrity; a man whose efficiency and accuracy are the first rule of life; and a man of the highest personal character, B. E. Myers is, without doubt, the most logical man with whom to trust the important office of town treasurer.

Are You a Lawbreaker

TWO Negroes were recently speaking about the legislature of their state, which was about to open. One asked the other what it was going to do, and upon being told that it was going to pass more laws inquired why, in view of the fact that it had passed several hundred laws the year before. To this inquiry, the other Negro unconsciously made a very pertinent reply when he said they had to pass the new laws because the old ones were "broke."

With the tens of thousands of laws passed every year covering all sorts of trivial and personal matters affecting the liberties and actions of the individual in his home, on the street and while traveling, it is difficult not to break laws.

We are today passing law after law which makes it unlawful to do an act which he mere doing of, in itself, is not morally unlawful. Such laws are hard to enforce and more people become law-breakers, feeling that they are not actually doing anything wrong.

An attempt to force a Sunday law upon the people of this country would be in effect just another and a more glaring example of this type of legislation. The fact that a man desires to spend his Sunday in his garden with a rake and a hoe, does not make him a criminal. But if the proponents of this type of legislation are successful in their admitted effort to force a program of Sunday legislation upon the people, the mere act of digging weeds from the door yard will make one a breaker of the law of the land.

Furthermore in their efforts to gain their point in this regard, the proponents have lost sight of one of the very vital points of the constitution—that guaranteeing religious freedom to everyone. While most of the citizens of this country hold Sunday as a day of religious service, a great part of the population observe other days, this includes the Hebrews, the Seventh Day Adventists, the Seventh Day Baptists who observe Saturday, and Mohammedans who observe Friday. Even though in a numerical minority these people deserve consideration.

The law as proposed before congress is strictly religious legislation and as such has no place before that body. The constitution provides for a complete independence of church and state. Any bill which directly or indirectly threatens the freedom granted to all under this constitution is a direct menace to the constitution and to free government.

Since that memorable date, CHIROPRACTIC THEORY has been accepted by all unbiased thinkers along health lines. It is accepted as the MASTER KEY unlocking the centuries old disease mystery.

Most wonderful of all, CHIROPRACTIC has proven this by RESULTS!

Such is its widespread and splendid prestige that over 30,000 practitioners are organized to eradicate disease all over the world.

The CHIROPRACTOR has the profound conviction based on science and discipline, that his Method of SPINAL ADJUSTMENT is the most accurate, successful and permanent health restorative known.

You cannot estimate the priceless value of this discovery unless you read its literature. Then it will be clear.

There were no gulls, no casks, no bottles. The furniture was scant, and of substantial and inexpensive make. There was an oil heater in a corner, and a large tank nearly full of oil beside it. There was an oil cook stove, also, with pans, kettles and rough dishes. There was fishing tackle strewn about, old magazines, and in a corner cupboard a few rough ends of food: beans, coffee, salt and rice. Some canned things, too, and a piece of salt pork. There were old pipes lying about, cigar stubs and scattered tobacco. The room it every respect was exactly as it would be left by a group of fishermen, lumbermen or hunters.

Others, inspectors, any one might step into the room, examine it from ceiling to rough rock floor, and find it above suspicion. Yet Rand knew that within a space of two hours fully thirty men had left that very spot.

With revolver and flashlight in hand again, he left the basement room and went to the stairs. Heavy curtains, thick and wide, covered every door and window so that no possible ray of light from within could be seen from without.

On the upper floor were sleeping rooms, six in all, and two baths, although the water was not connected and the tubs were dusty and dry. One of these rooms, the one on the north looking down to the cove, Rand knew had been occupied, although but rough blankets were thrown loosely on the bed. Still it and the feeling about it of recent occupancy.

"Gays" gentlemanly Ingram, he thought with a boyish grin. "Couldn't stand it below with the Chinks. No wonder his eyes are red."

Satisfied at last, he went down, careful to leave everything behind him as he had found it, and clambered up through the narrow basement window again, not without great difficulty. Once more he was obliged to crawl out, head first, and return in order to replace the window as he had found it, which he did carefully, edging it tightly in, and blocking it loosely with rocks from without. Then he made his final exit.

"I hope nobody knows me on the island before I have a chance to argue about it," he thought rather anxiously, as his legs sprawled out from beneath the piazza into the open air.

Evidently, however, the intrusion had been unobserved, and very hurriedly he threw the stones back into place to give the same appearance as before his entrance. Then he crossed the woods toward the Lone Pine.

It was after nine o'clock. Rand was not shaved, his face and hands were scratched and bleeding, his hair was matted with dust and bits of earth and moss, his clothes were grimy. He glanced down at himself, smiling. But he went on.

"I have no right to cheat her out of such a thrill as this," he decided. But he hurried his steps, for he had no desire to explain his appearance to any other but Gay.

Her amazement at his appearance at her door equalled his expectations. "Rand—Rand," she gasped weakly.

"Let me in, let me in," he urged laughingly. "Don't leave me out here with the burden of crime upon me, for the first Chink to take a pot shot at."

Hurriedly she drew him into the room, closed and locked the door behind him.

"Rand—Rand—what have you done?" she whispered.

She listened silently while he told, in sketchy fashion, the events of the night. Her eyes upon him were terrified and troubled. When he finished his recital with a jaunty triumphant gesture, she turned on him passionately.

"You shouldn't do such things," she cried thickly. "You should not! You have no right to take such chances. Oh, Rand, what do they care for murder? Think of that poor boy—"

It was not until he had been well fortified with strong coffee that she asked him gently, for her sake, to give up this ridiculous, dangerous enterprise and pay no more attention to the activities in the Little Club. She said she was sorry she had ever told him anything about the affair in the cove, she felt she had led him into terrible danger.

"I keep thinking of that boy, Rand. They are utterly unprincipled, unscrupulous. I know they are. They would stop at nothing. If anything happens to you, it will be my fault."

Rand tried to reassure her, promised to take every precaution, but he would not consent to give up the undertaking. He was sure he had his finger on a thread that would unravel a vast network of intrigue and crime involving many thousands of dollars, perhaps hundreds of lives. He was going to have the reward the unraveling would entail, but more important than that, he was going to have the sport of unraveling. He would not yield to her.

"And first of all, I'm going to show you your sad-eyed friend. He's a crook, and I'll prove it to you. Him, and his eyes!"

"Randy, dear," Gay said, her hands on his hair, drawing his face toward her, "did any one ever tell you that your eyes are sad, too? They are. Very sad. Your lips are merry and your voice is light, but your eyes are always wistful. The voice is what one makes it—by the eyes—Yes, open windows to the soul. Sad, very sad."

CHAPTER IX

It was amazing to Gay that the island, enmeshed as it was in a network of lawless enterprise so flagrant as to include open murder, should continue its placid aimless course of every-day, untroubled calm. The Captain flattered from the hotel drains to the Nixon porch and talked regretfully on his boat.

Auntalmiry, who after Mrs. Andover's stern denial of a Christmas party, had remained wistful, quiet and meek, climbed the hill one day with the old bright happy flush on her cheeks, and old bright light in her weak blue eyes. She was laughing.

"Oh, it is a lovely morning, Gay, a lovely morning. Coming on to Christmas now, isn't it, coming on to Christmas?"

"Yes, it is. Did—Alice Andover say you could have the party, after all?"

Auntalmiry burst into joyous gentle laughter. "Oh, my dear, when I think of Alice Andover—dear Alice! She is a fine woman, for all her faults, one in a thousand. But when I think of all her administering, and her bossing, and her scheming—and all she gets for it—oh, no," she interrupted herself, trying to smother her exuberance. "Oh, no, no Christmas party this year. Oh, no! She shook her little silver head, but could not shake away that air of joy."

She said she had only come to borrow a bag, a good-sized hand-bag. She wanted to take—some things—over to town. She said she would like to keep it several days, if Gay did not mind, and promised to be very careful of it. She chose the larger of two hand-bags Gay gladly offered, explaining that she wanted it to hold—well—plenty.

A few days later she came again to explain that she was not yet through with the bag, and to suggest to Gay, if she did not mind, that perhaps it would be better not to say a word about it to Alice Andover.

"She's a fine woman," she said joyfully, "one in a million, a credit to the island, a typical Maine character."

Hurriedly He Threw the Stones Back Into Place.

A capable administrator, too, and all that. But once in a while she gets—well, as you might say—just a wee bit nosy."

Alice Andover, too, climbed the hill to the Lone Pine.

"See anything of that foolish old woman down—there?" she inquired, jerking her head impatiently toward the orchard below.

"Once in a while. Not often."

"She's up to something. I don't trust that woman. You watch her, and if you see anything out of the way, you tell me. I'm the administrator, and I've got to keep an eye on her."

It was disappointing both to Gay and Rand that with all the little threads of mystery within their grasp, nothing happened. They kept shrewd watch of forest, clubhouse and shore, but all remained silent and deserted, so that after a few weeks her interest waned. Rand, however, continued faithfully to go to the clubhouse every night, for he knew that eventually the gang would come again, and he was ready for them.

He had learned about boats leaving Portland harbor at the time the Chinese immigrants left the clubhouse, and found there had been several freighters outward bound, two for the south, three for Europe, and one which had called at the port coming down from Canada. He had looked up the records of every one of these boats, and tabulated the information, but the name of Ronald Ingram was not connected with any of them. So he was obliged to await their return, and daily scanned the sailing reports for news of them.

October faded goldenly away, and November settled down grayly over the islands of Casco Bay.

About noon on the third day of November, a cold rain set in, driven by a hard wind from the northeast. By mid-afternoon the first snow-easter of the season was raging along the coast. The rain had turned to cutting bits of ice, like burning chips from steel. All afternoon Gay sat in her window-seat, listened to the wind lashing the bare trees of the dear little forest, watched the white sheet which tore past the window on great gales of wind, and looked down to the sea, snow white with foam. Finally she fell asleep.

It was evening when a step on the porch and an accompanying whistle awakened her. She sprang to her feet and went forward, dizzily, to meet Rand.

Gay took his hands, let him gently to the window-seat, sat beside him. "Rand," she said evenly, "if you want me to marry you, I will."

"Now, say it again, slowly. I don't think I understand."

"Yes, you do. If you want me to marry you, I will."

"If I want you to marry me—you will." Rand repeated slowly. He kissed her. "Thanks, Gay, but I don't."

Gay sighed a little, sighed in relief perhaps. Certainly she smiled, but it was a drawn smile that did not touch her darkened eyes.

The island shut itself up, more and more, behind the protective screens and storm windows that presaged the coming of winter. The women baked, and sewed, and chatted. The men got in the last of the wood, sorted the winter apples, went over the furnaces and the plumbing.

Mrs. Alice Andover came to the cottage, but not often, for she was fond of creature comforts, and her enthusiasm for the winter climate of her native state was limited to an oil burner in her furnace, a birch log in her fireplace, and a pretty Parisian knitted scarf about her aristocratic shoulders.

"What's the old fool doing now?" she demanded, with the brusque nod toward the orchard that meant Auntalmiry.

"I don't know," Gay said evasively. "I don't see much of her."

"I've been there a dozen times, and never nobody home," Mrs. Andover complained. "There's no foul like an old one. She's a perfect gadabout. Let's go down and see what she's up to."

So they went down the hillside and knocked at the door of the Apple Tree. There was no answer, although distinctly they could hear slight sounds within, quick shuffling, muffled footsteps, the sly creaking of a door, then silence. Alice Andover turned the knob, but the door was locked.

She marched grimly around the house, Gay following, and tried the kitchen door, only to find it locked also.

Shamelessly she peered in every window, one after another, but there was nothing to see but the tidy house, empty.

"The old fool is in the closet," Alice Andover said grimly. She rapped smartly on the window. "Auntalmiry, Auntalmiry, come out! We see you—come on out, you big ostrich!"

But there was no answer.

"She's up to something," Alice Andover said anxiously. "She's mad about that Christmas party. All for her own good, and that's all the thanks I get. I thought, just to pacify her, I'd let her fix little bags of candy and nuts for the children. Though they don't deserve 'em. They're snowballs, chasing cats, breaking windows—But just to please her. So I ordered fifty pounds of Christmas candy sent to her."

"Oh, that's just dear of you—"

Alice Andover frowned at her. "John pays half. I'm only the administrator. John pays half. She's got fruit, she's got vegetables, her cupboard's full of canned goods, and her cellar full of coal and wood. She can't wait for anything. Can she?"

It did not seem indeed that she could. Her larder had been bounteously and gloriously stocked—a hundred pounds of sugar, brown and white, cereals, rasins, dried fruits, beans, canned goods. No, certainly she could not be in need of anything. Besides, there was her charge account at the grocery, and her modest account at the bank.

"You don't suppose she would go on a starvation diet to spite me," said Alice Andover anxiously. "I don't think she knows enough to do that."

When Alice Andover had gone, Gay went down again alone. Mrs. Andover's anxiety had communicated itself to her, and Gay was persistent. She meant to find out if Auntalmiry stood in need.

She anticipated a long wait on the door-step, and she intended to wait. So she was a little surprised when Auntalmiry, who had evidently been watching and knew she came alone, opened the door to her first light tap.

"That was not nice," Gay said severely. "Alice Andover is very uneasy about you. It isn't right to worry her."

Auntalmiry burst into soft but joyous laughter, unashamed.

"Oh, the administrator. When I think of Alice Andover—"

Auntalmiry was quite speechless with secret satisfaction.

"But why did you keep us out?"

"Now, Gay, don't be cross. It's just a little secret of mine. You'll know before long. I was doing something I didn't want Alice Andover to know about. Now let's have a nice cup of tea. It's good to see you again."

But for all her pleasantness Gay returned at last no wiser than she came.

November did not live up to the threat of its coming. The weeks passed. But two days before Thanksgiving, Gay awakened in the morning to find the island thickly blanketed with snow, the trees pendant with it, the valley submerged. And great cloudy flakes whitened the air.

"This is beautiful. It is worth living for," Gay thought. "How childish to live always in a city where snow means only slush, and grime, and murky skies."

She sat in the window-seat and watched it for hours, tracing the course of the great white flakes, and listening for the soft little kiss with which each dropped among his brothers. By afternoon all the low brush and shrubs were thickly covered, and the line of boats upturned on the shore was like a row of grave mounds. The afternoon waned, and finally, a little depressed with the silence and the aloneness of it all, she was aimlessly tidying up her rooms when she heard a gay voice calling:

"Hello, the house. Come out, and see the sun."

She ran down to find Rand in snow half to his waist, at her window that led to the valley, which he was struggling to raise from without.

Gay caught up a warm cape, and ran to help him.

"You darling!" she cried, in warm welcome.

Help Kidneys By Drinking More Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Cheap Travel by Plane

The Jackman brothers of Slough, in Buckinghamshire, England, have two hobbies, aviation and swimming, which they sometimes combine. They take their airplane from the hangar mornings, and fly to Littlehampton, Sussex, 50 miles away. There they land on the shore, have their swim, and fly back to Slough, all in time for breakfast. The brothers make the round trip in about an hour, and say that the running expenses of their machine are lower than those of an average high-powered motor car.

When You Feel a Cold Coming On. Take Laxative BROMO QUININE Tablets to work off the cold and to fortify the system against an attack of Grip or Influenza. 30c—Adv.

A Joy-Rider

Bald-Headed Motor Salesman (briskly)—Ah, good afternoon. Do you think I might interest you in a motor car?

Flapper (looking him over)—You might—in one. You certainly don't strike my fancy just at present.

Some men are high livers. All gl-riffes are.

Grocer—Anything else besides the flypaper?

Banjo—Ah, wants a half-dozen raisins besides, Jes' fo' deccies.

A man who doesn't believe in religion has no call to make such a fuss about it.

World Interested in Secrets of Lake Nemi

At the bottom of Lake Nemi still softly murmuring its enchantments to the Grove of Diana, two galleries of Tiberius have slumbered these 1,900 years. Their rest is soon to be disturbed. Engineers say the water can be lowered sufficiently to permit the salvaging of the boats.

They were gorgeous craft, so legend tells. Time and Lake Nemi have, of course, absorbed the luxurious splendor upon which lolled an emperor and his friends in orgies of that long ago. But decks of gold and porphyry inlay are still intact where danced the footstep of some unremembered Ziegfeld, and rusted locks may yet creakingly endure which acted and shivered to the strain of cursing slaves.

There is always the splash of the galley oar in "the grandeur that was Rome." Just as there is always the servitude of the Helot in "the glory that was Greece." Still, we shall all be curious to know in what manner of boat Tiberius and his crowd put out to sea.

Cost of Spelling

An enthusiastic advocate of the simplified spelling system has figured out that the complexities of the present conventional method are costing the people of this country $225,000,000 annually in its printing, writing and teaching bills. It is contended that the young children lose a year and a half of the first four years of their school life in endeavoring to master the intricacies of our present system of spelling. This represents a considerable item, but in addition there is 15 per cent waste in the use of superfluous letters in writing and printing.

"The most valuable car ever offered for so little money"

John G. Willys
President, The Willys-Overland Company

So rapidly has demand mounted for the perfected Whippet, that four great plants—at Toledo, Elmira, Pontiac and Toronto—are taxed to capacity, and enlargement and expansion, to permit even greater production, are already under way. People continue to express amazement that cars of such remarkable quality and mechanical perfection can be offered at such low prices.

Here is true beauty—in color, lines, proportions and interiors. And here, too, are features which distinguish the finest American cars—low-slung full vision bodies, BIG 4-wheel brakes, gasoline tank at rear, full force-feed lubrication, silent timing chain, oversize balloon tires and snubbers and long semi-elliptic springs.

See this car—ride in it, and compare it with any other light car—for looks, for performance, for quality, for all-around desirability—in short, for value.

MENLO PARK

Council Meeting

The city council did not transact much business Tuesday night owing to the absence of two of the members, Mayor Blake and J. H. Heltzel. Ellis was chosen temporary chairman.

The clerk was authorized to notify the Menlo Park Sanitary Board concerning the bad condition of Oak Grove avenue and Fremont street, owing to the carelessness of the contractors now engaged in laying the new sewer system in that section. These thoroughfares have been dug up and left so to the detriment of public travel. The Sanitary Board has full jurisdiction in the matter.

A resolution was adopted appointing W. J. Murray a member of the Pulgas Mosquito Abatement district for a term of two years.

The dog license was taken up and discussed at some length. The further suggestions regarding to general traffic ordinance were left to the chief of police and the fire commissioner. They are to make recommendations.

Chief Furman was authorized to secure one hundred license tags for dogs.

The matter of compensation under the liability act was referred to City Attorney Whitworth to report at the next meeting.

The chief of police was authorized to appoint six special policemen to work without compensation and to serve at the pleasure of the chief.

No further business appearing the trustees adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning February 15.

Mayor Blake Ill

Mayor Blake is confined to his home with a severe attack of pneumonia. His friends will be pleased to learn that he is recovering and will soon be convalescent.

Opens Law Office Here

Frank Robinson Cain has opened a law office in the new bank building, where he will receive his clients and practice law in all its branches. He has an estate near Santa Cruz avenue, where he is residing in semi-retirement since relinquishing his lucrative practice in Chicago several years ago. He is anxious to get back into active work, although not desiring to be too active but just enough keep in the harness and in touch with Blackstone. He is an able lawyer, a good counselor and a successful practitioner and anyone intrusting him with their business may rest assured by splendid service.

Sharon Estate Reported Sold

It was reported this week that the Sharon estate was soon to be taken over by a San Francisco syndicate that is to establish one of the finest country clubs in the west on the place including golf links and club house and home for members. It no doubt will finally be sold for such purposes as no where else in the world is there a better or a more appropriate place for such activities. The home commands a complete view of the bay and surrounding country and the sloping hills would make an ideal golf links. Mrs. Sharon is far advanced in years and has gone to reside with her daughter, Lady Heath, in England and will not return here. The estate is closed and in charge of a caretaker.

Certain To Benefit Menlo Park

The big industrial development contemplated on the bay shore near North Palo Alto is certain to have a beneficial effect on Menlo Park and vicinity. It is said that the whole of the bay district from the cement works to Dumbarton bridge is to be lined with factories employing thousands of men who will seek homes here or in Menlo Park. Moral now is the time to buy property in these sections.

J. B. Leonard Known Here

J. B. Leonard who was recently appointed chief building inspector and engineer for San Francisco by Mayor James Rolph is widely known in this community. Some years ago he established a home on the corner of Laurel avenue and Oak grove now occupied by Dr. J. H. Raymond. Leonard is an expert structural iron builder and architect and has designed many of the big structures in San Francisco.

To Leave for New York

Judge Charles A. Shurtleff and his charming wife will depart next week for an extended trip to New York where Mr. Shurtleff will attend the annual convention of the national bar association. They will embark on the new steamship California and will go through the Panama canal. The return trip will be made over the Canadian Pacific. Their numerous friends in Menlo Park wish them a pleasant voyage.

Father James Bergin Visits Menlo

Father James Bergin, formerly pastor of the Church of the Nativity, and now filling a similar position in St. Anthony's parish, Oakland, is in Menlo Park every Tuesday to teach at the Sacred Heart College. Some time before leaving here he was a member of the faculty of that well-known institution of learning famed throughout the United States.

Those desiring to vote at the school trustees election on March 30th will have to register 30 days before that date. The city election takes place on April 9 and those desiring to vote at that election will be compelled to register on or before March 10. The last day for filing nomination papers is on March 20 at noon.

Purchases Home Here

Thomas Carleton, the popular teacher of mechanical arts at Sequoia Union High School, has purchased a cozy home at North Palo Alto, which he is to develop and improve. It is one of the prettiest dwellings in this growing locality.

2-Story Concrete Building

Contractors are figuring the plans for the two-story concrete building to be erected on Santa Cruz avenue by John Duff. It is rumored that chain grocery store is to lease the lower story of the new building. The upper story will be for office space.

Water Rates May Be Raised

The Bear Gulch Water Company has applied to the State Railroad Commission for permission to raise the water rates for this district. The hearing will be held in the city hall on April 9. Those desiring to contest the raise should be present on that date with substantial argument. It would appear that the rates at present are pretty stiff.

Will Be A Candidate

James G. Mason will be a candidate.

date to succeed himself as grammar school trustee. Thus far he seems to be unopposed for reelection.

Nuptial Mass

At a nuptial mass in the church of the Nativity commencing at 10 o'clock Saturday morning pretty Miss Marcella Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith of Menlo Park and Leonard Clelland, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Clelland of North Palo Alto will be united in marriage by Father Kennedy. After the ceremony a reception and breakfast will be held at the home of the bride's parents. The matron of honor is to be Miss Mildred Geary of Mayfield and the groom's attendant will be Edward Smith. The bride-to-be is a graduate of St. Joseph's parochial school and San Jose Teachers' College. She is a talented and charming girl.

Archbishop E. J. Hanna celebrated mass and blessed a picture of Saint Teresa, the Little Flower of Jesus, in the Church of the Nativity yesterday. His Grace spoke in praise of the local branch of the National Council of Catholic Women who presented the picture to the church and feelingly referred to the great piety and devotion of Saint Teresa, the Carmelite nun, who was canonized a few years ago and who died in France in 1897. The beautiful picture was painted by Miss Hildreth Melore of Los Altos. This is the first local exhibition of the work of the talented young woman.

Will Marry In S. F.

Lester Lampard a former Menlo Park young man, will be married tomorrow evening in Grace Cathedral, San Francisco to Miss D. Carter, the beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Carter of Menlo Park.

The two Mexicans in robbing the dwellings of wealthy residents of Atherton reckoned without taking into consideration the spiritual power and influence of the great Saint Anthony, the patron of lost articles. For ages the masses have looked to the honored saint as the one having power to return goods that have been lost or stolen. Daily the prayers of the faithful ascend to heaven beseeching the kindly saint for such favors and very often these prayers are heard and the petitions are granted to those who have faith and believe in the power and influence of the great saint with the heavenly hosts.

Not only did the thieves remove valuable articles but they carried off a large statue of the good St. Anthony. The statue is among the goods recovered and is in the sheriff's office.

The culprits should have known better that interfere with the statue for they could not possibly expect to get away from the watchful eye of the saint who in time had his own statue returned and all their goods as well. Let this be a lesson to all wrong doers.
